

Forum Theatre instructor earns choreography award

Submitted by Jill Obereiner

Forum Dance Theatre's Ballet Master, Brent Caburnay, won the Regional Dance America National Choreography Recognition Award during the RDA Mid-States Ballet Association Festival, held recently at the North Shore Center for the Performing Arts in Skokie.

The award recognized Caburnay's choreography for a work titled "Coda," which was performed during the third night, considered the gala performance, wrapping up the Mid-States Ballet Association Festival.

Caburnay's "Coda" is a 12-minute, five-movement piece that celebrates the strength of women, and emulates how the struggle of losing someone is never easy, but how we must find the courage to move forward.

This beautiful tribute is dedicated to Caburnay's mother and depicts her strength through the loss of his father in 2014.

The piece was performed at RDA by Libertyville-based Forum Dance Theatre, a pre-professional contemporary dance company led by Artistic Director Kimberly Fletcher-Stibel.

Additionally, 21 local high school students who are members of Forum Dance Theatre will take "Coda" and several other pieces from Forum's 2015 repertoire to Europe this June, as they have been invited to participate in the Austrian dance festival YoungTanzsommer.

"Coda" is truly a work of art. It's magnificent to watch all of our dancers on stage working together to tell this story," Caburnay said. "I am proud to be able to work with such a talented group of young artists who are able to bring my visions to life while perfecting their craft."

"Kim (Fletcher Stibel) and Catie Deitz Griffith, director of Forum Dance Theatre II, worked diligently to prepare our dancers for their 'Coda' performances during Forum's 2015 season, with a major focus on both RDA and YoungTanzsommer," Caburnay said.

Forum Dance Theatre is a not-for-profit youth dance organization based out of Talent Forum in Libertyville. Tax-deductible donations can be made to help support these local dancers at Talent Forum, 450 Peterson Road, Libertyville, IL 60048.

Forum Dance Theatre serves as a catalyst for young, aspiring artists to envision, expand, and collaborate on dance works that challenge the artistic depth and creativity involved in contemporary dance.

CLC's geothermal project is teaching tool

Submitted by the College of Lake County

The College of Lake County's Grayslake Campus was turned into a living laboratory recently as 20 students and two instructors had the chance to observe contractors drilling wells for a new geothermal heating and cooling system being built on the Grayslake campus.

The students are enrolled in CLC's heating and air conditioning engineering technology program. Sustainability practices and technology are taught in the program.

The well-drilling is being done as part of the college's $163 million Sustainable Campus Master Plan, which includes improvements on all three of CLC's campuses.

Eighty 500-foot geothermal wells are being drilled on the north end of the Grayslake Campus soccer field to create a geothermal system that will provide heating and cooling to the campus's A and B wings and a cafe addition.

The design of the field will allow expansion in the future to serve more buildings, according to Dorothy McCarty, program manager for Cotter Consulting, a firm working with the college on master plan projects.

The project includes burying polyethylene piping below the frost line, where the ambient temperature is about 55 degrees Fahrenheit. The piping will circulate water from the wells through a sealed underground loop that will connect to heat pumps in the basement of the new cafe, McCarty said.

CLC heating and air conditioning instructors were eager for completion of the geothermal system so they can use it as a teaching tool.

"We've had a much smaller geothermal loop on the north side of the Technology Building that we've used to demonstrate a residential application," said Allen Smith Jr., an instructor in the program and department chair. "This larger loop for the entire campus will let us show students an example of a larger commercial system that will serve multiple zones and multiple buildings. Geothermal technology is the wave of the future, and knowing this technology will give our graduates an edge in the job market."

Students were intrigued by the new technology.

"Geothermal is now required if you want your building rated LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) platinum," student Matt Ivantic said. "To see a geothermal system being installed and to study it is pretty interesting."

Well-drilling began April 8. With local soil high in rock and clay content, it will take until August to finish the 80 wells north of the soccer field, said Jay Trout, project manager for the well-drilling contractor, Efflandt Geothermal Drilling, working as a subcontractor to DeKalb Mechanical.

An additional 47 wells will be drilled on the Grayslake Campus in the area south of the new Science and Engineering Building to serve that building, currently under construction.

When completed, the geothermal system will provide heating during the winter and cooling during the summer for four buildings, resulting in a projected savings on energy costs of more than 50 percent, according to David Agazzi, vice president for administrative affairs.

A groundbreaking ceremony for the new cafe addition and renovation of the A and B wings will take place at noon Saturday, May 16, in the Main Lobby between the A and B wings.
